

High Yield Routines

Read Aloud Teacher Read Alouds involves educators reading aloud to their students to model fluent reading, enhance comprehension, and foster a love for literature. Accurate decoding and fluency skills are the focus. 	Interactive Read Aloud The teacher reads aloud a selected text to the whole class, occasionally and selectively pausing for conversation. Students think about and respond to the text as a whole group, or in pairs or small groups. Comprehension and vocabulary building are the focus. (Fountas and Pinnell). 	Shared Reading The teacher reads aloud a selected text to the whole class, occasionally and selectively pausing for conversation. Students think about and respond to the text as a whole group, or in pairs or small groups. Comprehension and vocabulary building are the focus. (Fountas and Pinnell).
Story Workshop Story workshop nurtures children as storytellers, writers, readers, illustrators, and artists by integrating literacy, the arts, and play. Children are offered materials such as “loose parts” and art mediums to create, imagine, think, and play through ideas, concepts and thinking. (Story Workshop invitations, VSB). 	Reader’s Workshop Is a lesson framework that includes a mini-lesson, independent work time, and sharing-out time. 	Book Clubs Students meet in small groups to discuss a book they are all reading or listening to.
Guided Reading A small-group differentiated instruction that includes instructional leveled texts, and targeted teaching. This model allows teachers to target specific learning needs, provide appropriate scaffolding, and gradually reduce support to promote independence (The Next Step Forward in Guided Reading). 	Comprehension Strategies • Predicting • Questioning, • Visualizing, • Making connections, • Summarizing • Monitoring comprehension • Shifting the Balance Gr. 3-5, “Strategic Six Thinking Moves”	Reading Conferences Reading conferences involve one-on-one or small-group meetings between a teacher and a student(s) to assess reading abilities, provide personalized support, set goals, and offer feedback to improve reading comprehension and skills.
